Mia Love took on the abortion industry when she served in the U.S. Congress as the only freshman on the Select Panel for Infant Lives, investigating the selling of organs on the free market. Representing the 4th Congressional District of Utah, she earned the Marilyn Musgrave “Defender of Life Award” for her work on protecting life in Congress. Love is the first and only Republican Black female to ever serve in Congress. She shares an impassioned story about her parents decision not to abort her. Today Love uses her conservative voice as a CNN correspondent.
